

DENZER'S PITCHING PUZZLED BOSTONS

READY TO INDICT DEVERY

Philbin Says He Has Evidence Connecting the "Big Chief" with Pool-Rooms.

Everything is in readiness for the presentation to the Grand Jury of evidence showing corruption on the part of high officials of the Police Department. Devery, Flood and others are entrapped in the meshes of the web skillfully and carefully spun by District Attorney Philbin.

Compared with what is to come, the revelations in the case of Wardman Bissert and Capt. Diamond will appear insignificant.

No point has been overlooked by the District Attorney. He is authority for the statement that every line of Whitney's confession has been corroborated, and that in seeking corroboration new evidence of an astounding nature has been secured.

A woman of the Tenderloin has related at length how she gave corruption money to policemen. She is in Capt. Flood's precinct. The connection of Devery with the pool-room element has been firmly established.

Devery, called back by the District Attorney from his vacation in Saratoga, is locked in his home in West Twenty-eighth street, surly and defiant as a bear at bay. The shutters are closed, the doors are barred, the interior is dark and the big "Chief" is the sole occupant of the house.

He is fearful of the next move of the District Attorney. He knows what it will be. To a reporter he said:

"I refuse to answer anything."

Despite this announcement Mr. Philbin has determined to make him answer some pointed and personal questions, and the time when he shall have to answer is not far off.

DEVERY TO BE PUT ON RACK.

At the request—virtually a command—of District Attorney Philbin, Deputy Commissioner of Police Devery left his pleasant surroundings in Saratoga last night. He arrived at the Grand Central station at 1:30 o'clock this morning, defiant, in a bluffing way that shows clearly that he is frightened.

There was no one to meet him at the station. He paid no attention to the policeman who saluted him. He got into a cab and rode to his home, No. 340 West Twenty-eighth street. His family is in the country, and the house was gloomy and forbidding as he entered the front door. He has been in that house ever since, locked in.

An Evening World reporter roused him at 2 o'clock this afternoon. He came to the basement door of the house in his shirt sleeves.

"Refuses to Answer."

"I refuse to answer anything," he said. He refused to say what had brought him back to town.

"If the District Attorney sends you a summons to appear before him or before the Grand Jury, what are you going to do?" he was asked.

"Let him send his summons; then I'll show what I'll do."

"Your enemies are making pretty serious charges against you," was suggested.

"Against me?" he asked, in mock surprise. "Must be some mistake about that. I haven't got an enemy in the world."

When asked if he knew Whitney he seemed to be about to make one of his characteristic remarks about the informer, but he checked himself.

"Say, sport," he said finally, "I guess I'm all right, huh? You'll see me at the police trials tomorrow."

With that he disappeared into the dark house.

Accompanied by his confidential secretary, Sergt. Sugden, Devery emerged from his house shortly before 3 o'clock. He went to a barber shop and got

RACE TRACK, BRIGHTON BEACH, Aug. 14.—That weatherman must have some sort of a grievance against the

New York trotting race promoters. Just think of the nasty, disagreeable, blustering, producing weather he dealt out today, the second day of the meeting! He sent no rain, that is, during the early part of the day, but he might as well have done so. Thick, heavy-laden clouds hung close to the track, and there were threats of a downpour any minute. It was not inspiring, even for the trotters and pacers. These travelers need sunshine to brace them to doing things of any account.

The prayers of all were that the rain would hold off. Secretary McCully even thought of sending the weather dealer

Stops on His Way East and Says the Men Who Work Must Be Honored.

HUTCHINSON, Kan., Aug. 14.—Vice-President Roosevelt, en route home from Colorado, stopped here for a short time to-day, and from the rear platform of his train, addressed several thousand G. A. R. men in State reunion.

He thanked the old soldiers in the name of the American people for their past valor and sacrifice, and referring briefly to civic life, warned them not to enjoy a life of ease.

"We can never hope to make the country all it should be," he said, "until we honor the man who works, until we accept the principle that the man is to be judged on his work as a man."

The brief speech was enthusiastically applauded.

TEN DEAD IN TUNNEL EXPLOSION.

Workmen Caught in Burning Pit at Cleveland Water Works.

CLEVELAND, O., Aug. 14.—Fire early to-day destroyed a temporary water works pit, two miles out in the lake, resulting in the death of at least ten men, while two others were probably fatally injured.

Four of the dead men were workmen who were in the pit, eleven others were at work in the tunnel leading from the pit, and two were on the lake. As air which was pumped from the pit to supply the men working in the tunnel was shut off by the flames it was at first supposed that these men had all perished.

Subsequently, however, nine of the men in the tunnel were rescued after heroic work upon the part of their fellow-workmen.

Late today two men were still in the tunnel, but those rescued state that one of these, Victor Kaufman, of Canton, is dead, and the other is thought to be dead.

Four of the dead men have been identified as Michael Snyder, Arthur Hasty, John Martina and Victor Kaufman. The first three named were drawn out, Kaufman was suffocated, and five others were burned to death. One of the men whose companion given up as lost, made up the total of ten dead.

Everything was a total wreck after counting the dead and those rescued. It was ascertained that eleven men were underground.

When the flames had been subdued a fireman was lowered into the pit and rigged up an apparatus for the rescue of the men.

In a few hours nine of those imprisoned had been rescued. Of these, two were fatally injured. They were John Lee, whose back was broken, and O. Braddock, critically burned.

The fire was caused by the explosion of a boiler.

DROWNING MAN BRAVELY SAVED.

PARTNER AND FRIEND SWAM TO SINKING LAWYER'S AID.

Rosenberg, Seized with Cramps at Bergen Beach, Was Rescued Just in Time.

Madden and Finn were not far from Mr. Rosenberg when a cry from the crowd called their attention to him. He suddenly gave a yell and sank. Madden and Finn swam to his aid as quickly as possible. Rosenberg was helpless and drowning, and with great effort they got him into shallow water, where other bathers could aid them.

Mr. Rosenberg was unconscious, and they carried him to the yacht club house, where after two hours of hard work Mr. Rosenberg recovered his senses and learned who had saved his life. There were tears in his eyes as he thanked his rescuers.

Mr. Rosenberg explained that he was suddenly seized with cramps.

STEEL STRIKE NEAR AN END.

Amalgamated Workers Reported Ready to Go Back to Mills.

A settlement of the steel strike it was declared in financial circles this afternoon had been reached, and only the details remained to be concluded.

The basis of the reported agreement was not stated, but said to be wholly satisfactory to strikers and the magnates.

While the leaders on both sides were non-committal and would not even admit that negotiations were on, the rumor gained strength and was repeated in telegraphic reports from Pittsburgh.

It was related circumstantially that the Amalgamated Association knew that it could not win and that the United States Steel Corporation feared the loss of skilled men and orders to the independent mills.

As a continuance of the struggle meant a loss to all concerned, plans were proposed acceptable to all.

At the office of J. Pierpont Morgan it was said that the strike could not be discussed.

On Wall street, however, the word passed around was "the steel strike is near an end."

The Steel stocks held their own in the market and operators generally seemed to have confidence in the report.

WORK RESUMED IN PAINTER MILLS.

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 14.—The big Painter Mills at Pittsburgh were started to-day. Two mills are in operation, and the management claim they will shortly make further increases. The reopening of the plant was a surprise to the strikers. It had been closed since the plant up. It is estimated that 13,000 men are now on strike in McKeesport.

The lower union plant of the Carnegie Company was an hour late in starting to-day and the strikers claim that they have the mill seriously crippled. Several skilled men left the place yesterday and joined the strikers and the latter claim to be able to tie the plant up.

The Pennsylvania Railroad provides speedy and satisfactory train service between New York and the great Middle West.
